DAILY, EXCEPT SUNDAY.
ROSSER & MCCARTHY,
Proprietors.

MONDAY EVE., DEC. 17, 1888.

SOME of the Canadian papers pronounce Hon. Ben Butteworth's annexation resolution "the greatest rot ever propounded by a man who had any pretensions to being a statesman." An opinion prevails in this country that the Cincinnati Congressman was a little "too previous" in what he did. But then he wanted to get ahead of some other statesmen.

SENATOR BECK visited the Capital Saturday for the first time since he was taken ill a few months ago. A special says his general appearance seemed to indicate a marked improvement in his condition, and persons who have not seen him for some time were satisfied that his temporary rest from official duties has resulted in great benefit to him. He leaves this week for Aiken, S. C., and Savannah, Ga.

SENATOR RIDDLEBERGER has got himself into an obstreperous mood over his treatment by some of the Republicans and has threatened to resign. His term expires the 4th of next March, and in case he should resign, the Governor of Virginia would send on a Democrat at once, which would make the Senate a tie for the remainder of the present session of Congress. Riddleberger is just the sort of a fellow to carry out his threat.

The Babies Cry For It,
And the old folks laugh when they find that the pleasant California liquid fruit remedy, Syrup of Figs, is more easily taken and more beneficial in its action than bitter, nauseous medicines. It strengthens the stomach and bowels. For sale in 50 cent and $1 bottles.

George Wilson's Minstrels.

The minstrel king and his galaxy of burnt cork artists last night received an ovation. The house was packed to the door before half past seven o'clock; before eight "standing room only" was the sign conspicuously displayed at the box office. Every one pronounced the performance from start to finish the best and most refined specimen of negro minstrelsy ever seen in Lexington. George Wilson, like good wine, only improves in time. His funnysims are always startling in their nervousness and his singing is the best of any comedian in his line. Notable among the vast list of attractions last night was Duval, the contortionist, Powell, the neer-mancer, and Swift and Chase, the musical wonders. Wilson's stump speech was simply indescribable.—Lexington, (Ky.) Daily Transcript, Sept. 1, 1888.

This minstrel troupe will appear here next Thursday night. Admission, 25, 35, 50 and 75 cents.

A Letter From the Far Northwest.

Ernie White is "swinging around the circle" at a lively rate. He is now at Portland, Oregon, in the extreme northwest part of the country. He writes: "Everything looks blue in this section. Business overdone as it is in the East. As far as I can learn everybody is stuck in real estate just as they are in Kansas City."

"California is not what it is cracked up to be. It rains there for four months in the winter at a time, and then it's dry the other eight months of the year. They can talk about California if they want to, but it is not what they say it is."

"The grass is green here now and the flowers are in bloom. Farmers are breaking up their ground and planting crops."

Stock, Field and Farm.

S. D. Bruce sold 78 horses at Lexington last week for $33,560, averaging $368. Twenty-seven horses brought $6,330 at a sale of Captain Gano Hill's property near Paris Thursday. Short-horn cattle sold very low.

J. E. Madden, of Lexington, has purchased of Witherspoon & Gilmore the celebrated three-year-old daughter of Macey's Hambletonian, Bosque Bonita, for $7,500. Bosque Bonita holds the world's best three-year-old half a mile record, 2:26 1/4.

The surplus thoroughbreds belonging to the Dwyer brothers were sold Thursday at New York. Eighteen were disposed of. Tea Tray, that cost $10,000, brought $4,000, Ballaton, $1,950, and Annie Burge, a bay filly by Luke Blackburn, $1,300. The rest sold for from $85 to $500 each.

One hundred barrels of whiskey belonging to Dick Tate, late State Treasurer, were sold at Louisville Friday for $2,650.

DR. E. P. WHEELER

Given Quite a Send-off at Cincinnati for Curing a Valuable Horse of Lockjaw.

Mr. E. P. Wheeler, the well-known veterinary surgeon, receives quite a send-off in the Cincinnati papers for curing a valuable horse of lockjaw after the animal had been given up to die of the disease. As Dr. Wheeler and the owner of the animal are both Maysville people, the particulars of the case are taken in full from the Commercial Gazette, which says:

It is seldom recorded in the history of veterinary surgery that a horse is cured of idiopathic tetanus, a peculiar form of lockjaw. The disease, in fact, in any form, is regarded as fatal. A valuable animal at the mail service stables, on East Fifth street, has been cured of this disease in its worst stage, and the case is a remarkable one in many respects. Tetanus is usually described as a powerful and painful spasm of the voluntary muscles, which is long-continued and uncontrollable.

The spasm of the muscles is that of rigid contraction. It is frequently the result of injury, although it also occurs without obvious cause. Of all domestic animals the horse is most liable to this disease. When the muscles of mastication are alone involved it is called trismus. When it chiefly affects the superior cervical or dorsal muscles, causing the head to be elevated and the spine curved downward, it is termed apisthotonos. The limbs are extended and flexion of them is performed with the greatest difficulty.

The animal referred to above is the property of Robert Anderson, who has charge of the stables, and though a very valuable horse, it has been worked regularly in one of the mail wagons. The horse showed the first symptoms of the disease one evening about 6 o'clock as it was being driven into the stables, and a half hour later it was in a helpless condition. The jaws were so tightly locked that a pencil could not be forced between the teeth; the head was thrown forward, the muscles of the neck stood out like whipcords, the eyes looked as if they were about to pop from their sockets, while the limbs were rigid and the tail stiffly protected.

There did not seem one possible chance in a hundred of saving the animal, and the owner said any one could have him for a dollar. Though it was regarded as a hopeless case, Veterinary Surgeon E. P. Wheeler was summoned. When he examined the horse he pronounced him a "goner," but this did not deter him from using remedies that might possibly counteract the disease. Waurana, a powerful poison used by the Indians in the northern part of South America for arming the points of their arrows, was tried in a very small quantity by means of hypodermic injections. Hensbane, the common remedy, was also injected in the same manner every half hour. For eleven hours the animal's jaws remained locked, when the muscles began to relax and there were indications of improvement.

During the entire night every little noise would startle the poor animal and he would quiver perceptibly. His breathing was fast and hard, and with each breath the tail worked up and down like a pump-handle. At noon the next day the danger mark was passed, and from that on the animal's recovery was rapid. Dr. Wheeler, in speaking of the matter, remarked that it was the worst case he had ever treated. "It is seldom," said he, "that the muscles of mastication and of the neck are affected at the same time. The horse is now in good condition, though a little stiff, yet it will be safe to work him in a few days. The remedies I used in this case I never tried before, and I naturally feel greatly elated over the result."
